May 2002, Volume 12, Number 4

Current Indicators

Utah's unemployment rate jumped from February's revised 5.5 percent to 5.9 percent in March 2002. This matches the revised December 2001 figure. The last time Utah's unemployment rate was this high was in 1987. Layoffs continue to swell the ranks of the unemployed. In fact, the tally of claimants for state unemployment compensation made a very unusual increase from February to March. This phenomenon may be linked to layoffs of temporary workers associated with the Olympic Winter Games. Approximately 69,000 Utahns were unemployed in March 2002, a 53-percent jump from the 45,100 in March 2001, when the rate was 4.0 percent.

Utah's other primary indicator of current labor market conditions, the year-over change in the number of nonfarm wage and salaried jobs, showed a loss of 1.1 percent, or 12,100 jobs, for March 2002. This indicator plummeted during 2001, dropping from 2.4 percent growth for January 2001 to a 1.3-percent loss for December 2001. Temporary hiring for the Olympic Games moderated the losses in January and February; a clearer picture of the impact of the recession is reflected in the March data. The last time Utah suffered year-over job losses was in 1982.

For the United States, the March 2002 unemployment rate, at 5.7 percent, is up two-tenths of a point from February's figure. But it is still slightly below December's 5.8 percent. In both December 2001 and March 2002, Utah's unemployment rate is higher than the respective U.S. rate. The last time this crossover occurred was in 1987. The 1.0-percent year-over drop in the U.S. nonfarm jobs total continues to reflect the nation's economic slowdown. The last time the U.S. lost jobs year-over was in 1992. One positive observation from the U.S. jobs data is that the seasonally adjusted monthly total employment increased by 58,000, the first month-over gain since July 2001.

Utah's total nonfarm employment can be disaggregated into two categories: private (non-government) and public. From March 2001 to March 2002, the private sector has seen a net loss of 14,400 jobs (1.6 percent). This was partially offset by a gain of 2,400 government jobs.

Industry-by-Industry

The long-anticipated drop in construction employment is underway. After a surprisingly active autumn in which the monthly employment exceeded year-ago levels, the losses began in December 2001. March 2002 had 5,600 fewer construction jobs than in March 2001, a loss of 8.5 percent.

The temporary employment flurry associated with the Olympic Winter Games had moderated by March. Utah's services division, the focal point of much of this activity, had year-over net job growth of 5,100 (1.6 percent), which still reflects some Games-related jobs. The recession-based downturn in business services, which began about a year ago, has ended. It cost Utah about 4,000 jobs; recovery will be gradual at best. The less-volatile services, such as medical, educational, and legal, are making moderate employment gains.

The finance/insurance/real estate industry group shows net growth of only 200 jobs. Depository institutions' 200-job loss is offset by modest expansion in the remainder of the division.

The recession in Utah's manufacturing division persists: a year-over loss of 8,400 jobs (6.5 percent) tells the story. Hardest-hit are primary metals (steel and copper), fabricated metals/machinery/computers, and transportation equipment, which show an aggregated year-over loss of 5,500 jobs. This division's performance is similar to the U.S. manufacturing division's loss of 7.0 percent of its jobs March-to-March.

Most industries in Utah's trade division (wholesale plus retail) are showing year-over employment losses; the division has 3,300 fewer jobs (1.3 percent) than a year-ago. Only motor-vehicle-related businesses, in aggregate, have seen growth.

Employment cutbacks in the various land transportation industries, in communications, and in the electric, gas, and sanitary-services group have cumulated to a 2,100-job, 3.5-percent deficit over the past twelve 12 months. Air transportation's 400-job gain is the only bright spot.

Employment in mining has fallen by 300 jobs from the March 2001 level. "Other mining and quarrying" (largely oil and gas extraction) added 200 jobs, but metal mining and coal mining lost 400 and 100 jobs respectively. This division's current 7,500 employment total, an all-time low, is only a fraction of its 20,300 peak achieved in 1981.

Government employers in Utah have 2,400 more staff than a year ago, an increase of 1.3 percent. The federal government's 1.8-percent, 600-job expansion is largely due to increases at defense installations. The state government budget woes are already impacting state employment—higher education made small year-over gains, while other state agencies lost 900 jobs. A net loss of nearly a percentage point is the result. Local government maintained its moderate growth pace by adding 2,300 jobs, a 2.3-percent expansion weighted toward non-education activities.
